Practical Information

Q. Food and Accommodation

A. A tea house is the hallmark of the Langtang Valley Trek. The altitude affects the quality of the tea house. The hotels on lower altitudes typically offer comfortable accommodations with electricity, toilets, Wi-Fi, and hot showers. The accommodation weakens in quality as the climb increases. Most of the accommodations along the Langtang Valley Trek are twin-sharing. Langtang Valley Trek serves various meals, from spaghetti to traditional Nepali food such as rice and lentils, which are the primary source of income for the teahouses. Vegetarian and non-vegetarian options are available. Both non-alcoholic and alcoholic beverages are served. Kyanjin Gumpa also serves local Swiss cheese.

Q. Best season for the trek

A. The warm weather from September to Mid-December is ideal for this hike. The mountains are easy to see, and trekking is easy. From March to May, many nature lovers flock to the lush rhododendrons and wildflowers. Rain is possible during the warmer months of June through August, and the trail can be slippery. However, after the drizzle, the mountains are at their clearest, and during this time, residents can be seen performing their usual techniques on the terraced fields.

Q. Trip Category

A. This trek is regarded as a moderate trek. Kyanjin Gumpa (3,870 m) is the highest point in the trek. You will likely ascend 1,000 m in elevation on average each day. Although unlikely, this hike carries a risk of altitude sickness.

Q. Health and Safety along the trail

A. During the trek, there is no shortage of water for personal hygiene. It is advised to bring purification tablets or a LifeStraw for drinking water. The toilet is simple and clean, even when squatting. There is a health post on the trekking trail at Briddim Rural Municipality. The health post only has basic supplies. Rescue operations can be carried out in the event of a medical emergency, and the cost will be paid by travel insurance. Kyanjin Gumpa has a helipad for quick evacuation. You can also readily seek assistance from the locals because of the neighborhood's extensive network of tea houses.
